We Have A Problem

In a 2006 Special Report, the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) estimated that 705,600 mentally ill adults were incarcerated in state prisons; 78,800 in federal prisons; and 479,900 in local jails.

Mental Health Act of 1963

Early Community Mental Health Clinic
“Even more than other areas of health and medicine, the mental health field is plagued by disparities in the availability of and access to its services.” Consequently, many of the individuals released into the community without support ended up incarcerated; it is fair to say that, instead of being “deinstitutionalized,” a great number of individuals suffering with mental illness were, in fact, “trans-institutionalized” into America’s jails and prisons.

Mental Health: A Report of the Surgeon General, 1999
The three largest mental health providers in the nation today are jails: Cook County in Illinois, Los Angeles County, and Riker’s Island in New York.
Incarcerated Mental Health

Diagnosable substance use disorders

Serious mental illnesses in jails:
- 14.5% men
- 31% women
- 3.2% general population
- 4.9% in state prisons

In state prisons, prevalence of serious mental illness is 2 to 4 times higher than in the community.

50% of inmates in state prisons have serious mental illness.

68% of all jail inmates have serious mental illness.

9% of general population receive appropriate treatment.
What We Now Find

Prisoners' mental health issues

- Depressive Disorder: 21%
- Manic-Depression, Bipolar Disorder, Mania: 12%
- Schizophrenia or Another Psychotic Disorder: 5%
- Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder: 7%
- Another Anxiety Disorder: 8%
- Personality Disorder: 6%

SUICIDE is the leading cause of death among inmates in local jails, and in the top five for state prisons.
A Strained System

- About 1 out of 3 state prisoners with mental health problems, 1 out of 4 federal prisoners, and 1 out of 6 jail inmates had received mental health treatment since admission.

- Taking a prescribed medication was the most common type of treatment.

- People with mental illnesses are overrepresented in probation and parole populations, at estimated rates ranging from two to four times the general population.
